

PAPER PROJECTS

Stylish Ideas to
Personalize Your Space

Umbrella Family

PA Day - November 22nd, 2024

How can we creatively explore the potential of paper with young children? How might our own artistic journeys as educators inspire children's processes without setting rigid models for them to follow?

Now, imagine you're presenting paper strips and a stapler to a group of children. How would you encourage them to experiment and play with these materials freely? Would you provide any initial guidance, or let them dive in on their own?

As someone deeply drawn to creativity from an early age, I remember cutting out magazine figures, tossing them in a bag, and pulling them out at random to create stories. This early love for inventive connections has stayed with me—I'm always searching for new ways to link ideas, materials, and people.
